

Grace Trahan-Rodecap Biography

Grace moved to Indianapolis more than 20 years ago after working for five years at her hometown station in Southeast Texas. Grace loved reporting and anchoring at the station she grew up watching, but she couldn't resist the challenge of spreading her wings and working in a bigger city. She sent her resume tape to a "head-hunter" agency and before she knew it, she received an offer to work at WRTV in Indianapolis.

Grace didn't know a soul in Indiana, but felt that God was leading her here for a reason. Her future husband still remembers the day Grace arrived at the station for her interview. (Grace doesn't remember seeing him that day, but she admits she was pretty nervous!)

Grace worked for 18 years at WRTV. She started as a reporter and when she left, she was the Morning and Noon Anchor. While working at WRTV, Grace got married and had three children! Getting up at 2:45 in the morning to report for work became increasingly difficult as Grace began to raise her family. She prayed that God would lead her down a path that would make it easier for her to be the kind of mother she wanted to be.

In 2012, Grace's prayers were answered. She left WRTV and accepted a job in Marketing/Public Relations at The Orchard School, which is where two of her children attend school! She's also a freelance reporter for a new, independent program called Boomer TV. Grace is a member of St. Monica Catholic Church where she has served as a cantor, and she is a member of small church community. Grace, her husband Joe, and their three children, Christian, Nicholas and Rachel, are proud to call northwest Indianapolis their home.
